December 15, 2010 New Logistics and Fabrication Facility

After more than two years of searching for the ideal location for our main logistics facility, we found a property in Conshohocken, PA, and signed a long-term lease in 2010. This property allows us to re-establish existing pipe and skid fabrication, have a larger warehouse for staging of equipment, shipping/receiving, and tool management, and provides a substantial outdoor lay-down area for room for growth. As of mid-December, 2010, we vacated the shops we maintained in Philadelphia and New Jersey.

The new building is a 23,000 SF heavy industrial building constructed of brick and steel, formerly part of Allenwood Steel, with 15,000 SF covered by overhead cranes. It sits on 2 ½ acres which provides plenty of room for staging of equipment and loaded flatbed trailers destined for job sites.

The Conshohocken location enables us to consolidate and be more centrally located to the markets we serve, and provides a foundation for Burns Mechanical to service our clients and jobsites with much greater efficiency.
